

2017 Level I Dry Needling with Cadaver Anatomy Course Description

New for 2017, IAOM and ODNS will launch a new format for our Dry Needling courses with Cadaver Anatomy consisting of an online course and a 2.5 day practical workshop.

Level I Online Course:

- Pre-course reading with a quiz.
- Online lectures by ODNS staff consisting of the following topics:
 - historical overview
 - the neurophysiology of superficial and deep dry needling
 - ethics, precautions and contraindications
 - dry needling for radicular pain
 - clinical reasoning with the role of agonists and antagonists.

The online course includes exam questions for each lecture. This online portion must be completed within the month before the practical course, and will fulfill written examination requirements for dry needling courses.

Level I Practical Course:

This course begins on the Friday evening to allow extra time in the cadaver lab, which earns you more CEU's than our basic course. We will take you into the cadaver lab each day to review the areas you are about to needle and actually see where you needle is going!

The two-day intensive will prepare participants to treat most of the common diagnoses that involve myofascial pain.

The importance of safety and clean techniques are taught and practiced throughout the workshop, ensuring that participants become accustomed to working with gloves and maintaining a neat and safe workspace throughout. They will practice the techniques of inserting, manipulating, removing, and disposing of the needles on the Friday evening of the course.

Students will learn and practice the use of superficial dry needling including fascia and scars, periosteal pecking, and deep dry needling of the buttock, thigh, shoulder, cervical, and lumbar muscles.

Case studies are included to apply clinical reasoning and recognize common indications for dry needling.

This practical course ends with a practical competency exam.

Who can attend:

Only licensed medical practitioners may attend. This may include PT's, OT's, Athletic Trainers, Nurse practitioners, acupuncturists, PA's, DC's, DO's and MD's. Before attending, please check with your state/country's licensing board that dry needling is within your scope of practice.

What is included:

All the equipment that you will need for the course is included. When you arrive, you will be issued with a complete needling kit, which will include all the needles that you will use for the course and more. Gloves, sharps containers, and a station set up for needling will be ready for you.

You will receive a detailed manual for the course, and full catering is included.

Registration Fee: $1095
