

2016 Level II Dry Needling with Cadaver Anatomy Course Description

New for 2016, IAOM and ODNS will launch a new format for our Dry Needling Level II with Cadaver Anatomy consisting of an online course and a Friday evening followed by 2-day practical workshop.

Online Course:

- Pre-course reading with a quiz
- Lectures by ODNS staff consisting of the following topics:
 - Tensegrity and it's significance to dry needling
 - Applications of EStim with dry needling
 - Adverse events
 - Nutritional considerations
 - TMJ Dysfunction

The online course includes exam questions for each lecture. This online portion must be completed within the month before the practical course, and will fulfill written examination requirements for dry needling courses.

Practical Course:

As an experienced dry needling practitioner, this advanced course is a must to complete the use of dry needling with patients presenting with headaches, TMJ dysfunction, tennis and golfers elbow, carpal tunnel, CRPS, plantar fasciitis, tibial compartment syndrome, sprained ankle, hallux valgus, thoracic, abdominal, and pelvic pain.

The goal of this advanced dry needling course is to gain expertise in needling the more delicate and higher risk areas in the body. This course begins on the Friday evening to allow extra time in the cadaver lab, which earns you more CEU's than our non-cadaver Level II course. We will take you into the cadaver lab each day to review the areas you are about to needle and actually see where you needle is going!

Techniques include dry needling of the face and anterior neck, arm and hand, lower leg and foot, thorax and abdominal wall AND the use of estim with needles.

It is a competency-based course, which will introduce more of the recent research and ends with a practical competency exam.

Who can attend:

ODNS Level I dry needling course is a pre-requisite for Level II. If you have completed a basic course with another company, we require you to first complete the Level I Online course and provide a copy of your basic course certificate before you attend Level II.

What is included:

All the equipment that you will need for the course is included. When you arrive, you will be issued with a complete needling kit, which will include all the needles that you will use for the course and more. Gloves, sharps containers, and a station set up for needling will be ready for you.

You will receive a detailed manual for the course, and full catering is included.

Registration Fee: $1095
